OPERATORS RESENT INTERFERENCE OF CONGRESS IN SETTLEMENT OF STRIKE; WILL REFUSE TO ENTER CONFERENCE

Indiana And Illinois Operators Agree To Refuse
Invitation Of Congressmen To Meet Mr.
Lewis—Says No Agreement Now Exists And
They Are Free Agents.

QUIET REIGNS IN ALL STRIKE AREAS

Chicago, Illinois, April 5.—Coal mine operators today planned a flat turn-down of the Government's offer to settle the miners' strike. Mine owners in Indiana and Illinois have agreed to refuse to accept the invitation of the Labor Committee of the House of Representatives to meet April 10th with John L. Lewis. The attitude of the operators towards the invitation of the House committee was learned today from one of the highest officials of the organization of mine owners. He reviewed the attitude of the operators as follows: "We do not understand what right Congress has to interfere in this dispute. We have no contract with the miners' union now and have not had since April 1st. Our old agreement expired on that date."

CONGRESSMEN WILL STICK TO TASK.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—The House Labor Committee, today awaiting responses to its invitations to operators in the central competitive field to attend a conference in Washington, today gave notice to the country that it would not cease its efforts until a settlement of the dispute is effected. "We are going to stick to this thing until we have reached a solution," Representative Bland, Republican of Indiana, declared today. Representative Nolan, Republican of California, Chairman of the committee, expressed a similar determination. He was the originator of the plan towards which the country was looking for a solution. If all present plans fail the House will probably fall back on the Federal Committee of Investigation provided by the Bland resolution.

Inhales Deadly Gas While Listening In On Radio Music; Is Found Dead

New York, N. Y., April 5.—Eugene K. Martin, a wounded war veteran, tuned up his radio receiving set and then turned on the gas in his apartment. To the music of a jazz band brought to him through the receiving set, Martin inhaled the deadly fumes and scrawled his farewell message to friends. Police found him dead in front of the set, the audio tube still aglow, showing the apparatus was still receiving.

Harding Plans General House Clean- ing Of Democrats To Get Effi- ciency On His Policies.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—A general house-cleaning that will remove at least 2,000 prominent employees with Democratic leanings or views hostile to the views of the administration, has been decided upon as a sequel to the summary dismissal by the President of twenty-nine Bureau of Engraving chiefs. The President, it is said, has determined to obtain the highest efficiency of Government employees and that the most important positions must not be held by Democrats or others not favoring his plans. He believes that while this policy may meet with some opposition at first it will be approved in the long run.

OPTIMISTIC REPORT ON GLASS, STEEL AND ALLIED TRADE

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 5.—(U. P.)—July and August will see the peak of prosperity in Pittsburgh's steel, glass and allied industries, leaders here predict.

Although many plants show a 25 per cent increase in production over last year, another three months will be necessary before the long delayed business boom will have arrived. Thousands of men, on part time employment or out of work for a year and a half will again be enjoying at least partial prosperity, even at somewhat lower wages.

A survey of the iron and steel industry shows a rapid movement toward normalcy. Some plants such as the National Tube and the McKeesport Tinsplate are operating on a 100 per cent basis. Schedules at Homestead and Braddock have been increased and the same is true of the big steel plants at Duquesne, Monaca and Clairton. Jones & Laughlin Pittsburgh Steel and others report increased production.

The plate glass industry is operating at about 90 per cent capacity, this being virtually normal, it is said. "The plate glass business has already come back to what may be regarded as a normal basis," declared Captain Charles W. Brown, of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. Conditions in the window glass trade are showing constant improvement, with local plants running at about 75 per cent of capacity as compared with 25 per cent a year ago.

"We are very optimistic as to the future," said G. H. Mayer, general sales manager of the American Window Glass Company, "and we feel that as soon as the spring building movement gets under way there will be a greatly increased demand for window glass products."

The United States Glass Company is operating its plants at about 65 per cent capacity. Marion Dryce, an official, said domestic trade is showing a gradual improvement, although foreign demand was slow.

Mrs. Benjamin Sykes has recovered from a recent illness.

Prevention Of Goitre To Be Discussed By Clearfield Physician

Contrary to previous understanding, there WILL be a regular meeting of the Rotary Club Thursday evening, April 6th at the Jordan hotel, 6 o'clock P. M.

This meeting is for the specific purpose of hearing Dr. J. Hayes Woolridge speak on the prevention of goiter a matter all too important to postpone. Dr. Woolridge has given a great deal of time and study to this subject and has definite suggestions and information that will be good news in this community if brought before our people.

BRITAIN POLITELY DEMANDS FRANCE PAY INDEBTEDNESS

Paris, France, April 5.—The French Government has received a note from England which is considered tantamount to a demand for immediate payment of the interest on France's debt to Britain of $2,500,000,000. Marquis Curzon, British Foreign Minister, indicated that Britain could not renew the three year convention of 1919, whereby France was permitted to postpone payment of interest due to war time loans. The whole question of inter-allied debts and of European debts to America may be brought up at Genoa as a result of this action of Britain. France, it was stated, will reply to England that it is impossible for her to consider payment of her debt apart from the whole program of European debts, including those owed by Germany.

SHERIFF GORMAN IS DISSATISFIED WITH THE AUDITORS TOO

Files Appeal Today And
Court Will Be Asked
To Untangle Claims In
Triangular Dispute.

ITEMS SET FORTH

County Auditors in Clearfield county, like the famed Dodo, is an extinct species nowadays following the establishment of a County Controller. The County Auditors ended their official life with the completion of last year's audit and while every body appears to be satisfied with the superseding of the Auditors by the Controller, nobody appears to be either pleased or satisfied with the findings of the Auditors on their last attempt in 1921.

The first uprising against the 1921 Auditors report occurred last week when the County Commissioners appealed from the settlement with Ex-Sheriff A. M. Gorman, alleging that too much money was allowed the Sheriff on some fifteen items, totaling something like $7900. As a matter of course there was not that much money involved in the objections, but specific objection were raised to certain charges making up that total, which, as a matter of course, makes the amount of money involved in dispute very much less than the total of all the items enumerated.

This morning the "shoe is on the other foot" and we find Ex-Sheriff Gorman, through his attorneys, Smith & Smith and A. M. Liveright, also appealing from the award of the County Auditors. In his appeal Sheriff Gorman specifies no less than nine different items wherein he alleges the County Auditors erred in reducing his bills. These items and the amounts actually involved in each case are as follows:

1. Error is claimed in the deduction of $1.00 from the bill or advertising general election proclamation.
2. In deducting $4.50 on fees charged on commitments.
3. In reducing his fees for summoning jurors $34.
4. By deducting $688.28 from his bill for executing warrants and Commonwealth subpoenas.
5. In deducting $400 from bill for taking prisoners to Western Penitentiary.
6. In deducting $79.75 from his bill for indictments and Commonwealth costs.
7. In reducing bill for boarding prisoners from 10,781 days at 50c per day to 10,714 days or $33.50.
8. In deducting $45.17 from the total credits allowed, which should have been $11,275.90.
9. In limiting total balance due Gorman for two years—1920-1921—to the sum of $11,381.04 when the amount of such balance is dependent upon the determination of the proceedings as to the 1920 settlement in which appeals are now pending before the Court and upon determination of the items appealed from.

Betrayer Of Edith Cavell, Brave English Nurse, Is Given Death Sentence

Mons, Belgium, April 5.—An echo of one of the world war's most poignant tragedies was the sentence of death passed here yesterday against the traitor Jernos, who betrayed Edith Cavell into the hands of the Germans. A public execution of the condemned man, against whom the entire community has declared undying hate, will take place here immediately. Jernos, whose betrayal of the nurse to the enemy resulted in her execution, is being closely guarded against attempts at lynching.

"Unwritten Code" Of The West Will Be Invoked To Save John P. Day, Jurist, From Hangman

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, April 5.—The "unwritten code" of Oklahoma will be invoked to clear Judge John P. Day, millionaire oil man and politician, from blame in the killing of Lieutenant Colonel Paul Ward Beck, the handsome commandant of Post Flying Field. The code, which has been handed down from famous previous times in the southwest, provides that a man's home is inviolate. "Could any red-blooded American have done anything else," asked Day, in reviewing his story that he returned home from escorting guests from the party and through a high French window of his mansion saw Mrs. Day, beautiful Oklahoma and Washington society matron, struggling to free herself from the dashing aviator. Mrs. Day, hysterical from the tragedy and under the care of physicians, substantiated her husband's story. A half dozen mystery angles were injected into the killing today, but authorities said they would attempt to iron them out at the Coroner's inquest on Saturday afternoon.

Mahaffey Man Loses His Case Against McCordle Family On Assault Plea

The Punxsutawney Spirit of Tuesday had the following to say concerning the action of the Jefferson county criminal court in session at Brookville:

In the case of Merle Hoover, of Mahaffey, against Frank and Ward McCordle, of Cloe, in which the McCordles were charged with aggravated assault and battery, the jury found the defendants not guilty and directed the prosecutor to pay all the costs. In this case young Hoover claimed to have gone to Rossiter where he obtained some bad liquor. He started home and when he got to Cloe was put off the train because he had no money with which to pay his fare. He is alleged to have entered the McCordle home there without any apparent reason and was given a beating by Mr. McCordle and his 12-year old son Ward. Hoover was confined to the Punxsutawney hospital for about ten days following the affair. Mr. and Mrs. McCordle called on Hoover while in the hospital and made an offer to defray his expenses.

The appeal concludes by asking that an issue be awarded to try and determine the several matters in dispute.

Costs Must Be Paid In Memorable Slander Suit From Cooper Township

The last chapter, but one, in that Cooper township slander suit, wherein by agreement reached between the parties, Miss Lillie Young, of Kylerstown, was awarded damages to the extent of six Lincoln pennies on account of certain smashes or dents hammered into the plaintiff's character or reputation by the tongue of her neighbor, Mrs. Verne Rothrock.

The verbal assault upon which the slander suit was brought by Miss Young occurred about one year ago on the matter had been in the courts since that time. When the verdict arrived at following the agreement between the attorneys and the parties each litigant was directed to pay the costs she had incurred incident to the prosecution, that being due to the fact that in a damage suit where the verdict amounts to but six cents the costs do not follow the verdict, as in all cases where the amount recovered is beyond that sum.

In this case the costs, amount to $32.80 which will require Miss Young to come forward with $16.40, while Mrs. Rothrock must separate herself from $16.40. The payment of these costs will be the final chapter in this battle and will close the incident.

..: PRESIDENT OF COAL ASSOCIATION TELLS HIS SIDE OF THE STORY ..:

G. Webb Shillingford, President of the Central Coal Association of Altoona, an organization of coal operators recognizing union labor, issued the following statement protesting against the injustice and unfairness of the strike order of the United Mine Workers of America as it affects Central Pennsylvania:—

On April 1st, a strike of the 43,000 union mine workers of Central Pennsylvania began as directed by the United Mine Workers of America. This strike will affect every community in Pennsylvania where union labor is employed and this comprises the large majority of the industrial workers in Cambria, Clearfield, Jefferson, Huntingdon, Centre, Elk and Tioga Counties. The effect of this strike will be felt by every business and family resident in those counties. It is therefore proper that the members of the Central Coal Association, an organization of coal operators employing 15,000 men make a statement of the facts to the public.

Important Facts
1. This strike has been called by the United Mine Workers of America regardless of the fact that up until the present moment no demands of any kind or character whatever have been made by the representatives of the miners' union upon the operators of this district. No request for a joint meeting or conference had been made upon the operators by the miners for the purpose of negotiating a wage agreement to replace the agreement which expired on March 31. This arbitrary action on the part of the United Mine Workers is taken because the operators of Pittsburgh and the operators of Ohio refuse to participate in what is known as the Central Competitive Field Joint Conference. This conference is composed of the miners and operators of Ohio, Indiana

Illinois and the Pittsburgh District of Pennsylvania. The miners and operators of Central Pennsylvania were never participants in the Central Competitive Field joint conference and have no relation whatever, to it. You are witnessing the miners' strike this district being called upon strike because an outside body composed of miners and operators from different states have not met in joint conference as requested by the United Mine Workers of America.

2. The Operators' Association of Central Pennsylvania have expressed a willingness to meet the United Mine Workers of District No. 2 to negotiate a wage agreement to replace the one expiring March 31st, 1922. The operators of Pennsylvania have practiced the principles of collective bargaining for the past twenty-one years and have sought on this occasion to continue the application of these principles; to secure a conference for the purpose of learning whether or not it was possible to negotiate a large agreement with their employees conforming to economic and competitive conditions affecting our district, and upon which those mines that were in operation could continue to work and the mines that were closed down would be able to secure business in the competitive markets and resume operation; and to maintain and secure for Central Pennsylvania that share of the coal business of Pennsylvania to which it is justly entitled, upon which the prosperity of every community in the central part of our state largely depends.

3. The Central Competitive Field joint conference should not influence the miners and operators of Central Pennsylvania. We protest against the United Mine Workers of America pursuing a policy of making a basic wage agreement with the Central Competitive Field in which we have no voice and no vote, and upon the conclusion of such agreement compelling the operators and mine workers of Central Pennsylvania to accept its terms and decisions. This policy has been pursued by the United Mine Workers for the past twenty-five years, and the constant and recurrent strikes in the bituminous coal industry grow out of this plan of settlement—which permits a small and highly centralized body of miners and operators to exert a monopolistic control over wage and working conditions in the entire industry. This body (the Central Competitive Field) composes about 35 per cent of the miners and production of the country. The Central Pennsylvania coal operators desire to base their wage schedule upon the market and competitive conditions affecting their own district. They are denied this opportunity and their miners are called on strike without the operators having been officially notified of the

CURWENSVILLE

We are indebted to Prof. Grant Norris for a copy of the High School Annual. We have perused its pages with a great deal of interest and pleasure. It is impossible to make comparisons for it is the first of its kind in this Community, but we feel safe in saying that none in the future will be a greater success than this pioneer of Journalism in Curwensville High School fostered by the class of '22. New to the work, amateurs at editorials, beginning with Miss Elizabeth King, Editor-in-Chief, down through the list of Associate Editors, Historians, Poets, Artist and Prophets, each has assumed the task assigned in that same spirit which has actuated them thru their school life, The Spirit not of "I'll try" but "I Will," and each has accomplished its completion, far surpassing our expectations. It is indeed a volume worthy of connoisseurs and a credit to the class. The editorials are short and pithy, timely and to the point. In the light of the success of The Annual as a whole, we can over look the slight imperfections which such a volume must necessarily contain, and shoulder them wholesale upon the printer whose divine prerogative it is to make mistakes.

We cannot refrain from attention to Byron McDowell's pen sketches which are to be found on various pages. He has proven himself an artist indeed.

The Alumni Directory, in charge of Miss Elizabeth Wall, ably assisted by Miss Lois Vaughn is a heart appeal to each alumnus and tends to bring back the tender memories of Alma Mater.

The Curwensville Directory, edited by Miss Cora Wolf, assisted by Misses Lucy Brunetti and Elida Yacobi fills a long felt want in our town literature and is most complete. In fact there is not a dull page from first to last. It abounds in fun and witticisms, not forgetting the more serious side. Even the advertisements prove interesting reading, showing most plainly how deep a place is held by our schools in the hearts of our merchants and how

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Can human brains win in the great struggle that the insect is waging on the very existence of civilization. That is the question that is now agitating British men of science.

Professor Harold Maxwell Lefroy England's leading entomologist, has brought forward fourteen instances of the terrible ravages now being committed by insects throughout the world. His main example is the Argentine ant, which eats babies.

This insect first reached England in 1918, after having spread over half the world, especially Spain, since 1897. It has not merely devoured infants in their cradles in the Argentine, but it has completely wiped out the birds of Madeira by eating their nestlings and is ruining the orange and coffee harvests throughout the Eastern and Western Hemispheres.

It often kills the plants, not directly, but by encouraging other insects, especially the green fly, which it keeps as a man keeps cows. It even builds houses for them, acts as doctor, to them and defends them from enemies.

At the same time the ant, which is omnivorous, carries and spreads many of the worst human diseases. There is every fear that it may find a congenial home in London.

Professor Lefroy next instances the boll weevil, which attacks the cotton plant. After twenty years of research no preventive has been found against the insect, whose ravages are so well known throughout the cotton-growing areas. The professor agrees with the best American opinion that the next five years will see practically no cotton grown in America, and he anticipates that the world will be at least 7,000,000 bales short annually.

These are not the worst of the evils. Other instances that Professor Lefroy gives are:

The flea has caused 7,000,000 deaths in India by carrying plague.

The housefly kills 1,000 children in England every year by imparting infant diarrhoea. Houseflies, he says, are as numerous as they were 500 years ago; they carry typhoid, enteric, cholera and dysentery.

The British system of sanitation in Mesopotamia was ideally designed Tragedy Ended Youthful Love.

When I was eight years old I had a beau. One day he gave me a ring, which I prized very much. When I was at his house one day his mother saw the ring. She had been looking all over for it. Needless to say I gave her the ring and she gave Johnny something. That ended my first love affair.—Chicago Journal.

Enjoying Other Men's Minds.
I dedicate no inconsiderable portion of my time to other people's thoughts. I dream away my life in others' speculations. I love to lose myself in other men's minds. When I am not walking, I am reading; I cannot sit and think. Books think for me.—Lamb.

A number of women are on the verge of "breakdown" because of the prevalence of the "black box" house mite.

The beetle that destroyed the ancient oak roof of Westminster Hall is slowly but surely destroying St. Paul's and all the other ancient buildings of London.

The louse is the cause of typhus and all the other plagues in Russia and will wipe out nations if conditions prevent cleanliness.

Will intellectual man win against these blind insects? As Professor Lefroy. He is sufficiently optimistic to believe that he will, but that it will need all the energies of applied science for years to come to secure the victory.

One inference drawn by Professor Lefroy is the urgent necessity for establishing new cotton growing areas within the British Empire.

"There is no time to lose," he says. "Before the war the United States produced half the world's raw cotton. Her output has fallen from fourteen million bales to seven million bales and threatens to vanish under the peril of the boll weevil."

For the benefit largely of our friends Dr. Leopold and Harry P. Dowler, who have recently been exploring old Democratic Texas, and for the general information it contains, we publish the following story:

The rattlesnake catchers of the Brownsville, Texas, district are going through a period of severe depression as live snakes at present are bringing only 8 cents a pound, according to T. Gilbert Pearson, President of the National Association of Ambubuh Societies, who has returned from the work of staking out a proposed 150,000-acre tract in the southern tip of Texas as a game and bird sanctuary.

The greatest rattlesnake establishment in the world is maintained near Brownsville by a dealer named King, known as "Rattlesnake King." He had more than 100,000 rattlers in stock during December, Mr. Pearson said. These are sold to zoological gardens, snake charmers, circuses, naturalists and snake-lovers all over the country, but the demand has recently become low. Many Mexicans earn their living catching rattlers and are glad to get even 8 cents a pound for them.

Mr. Pearson's mission was undertaken at the request of the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of mapping out a great game reserve in the extreme south of Texas, where a stretch of sandhills exist on which are found between twenty and thirty species of birds including game birds not found elsewhere in the United States.

The 150,000-acre tract laid out by Mr. Pearson includes a large lake called Laguna de la Laja in Kleberg County on the King ranch, the largest ranch in the United States, which embraces more than 1,400,000 acres and is twice the size of the State of Rhode Island.

Besides being a bird sanctuary, this will be a refuge for the collared peccary, known as the wild pig, though it is not precisely a pig. It is like a cross between an antelope and a wild boar. It has been hunted so much by Mexicans for the hide and bristles that it is in danger of ultimate extinction, according to Mr. Pearson. He said that it had been decided at a conference of sportsmen which he attended in Texas to seek legislation protecting the peccary.

"It is the gamest and most dangerous wild animal in the United States," said Mr. Pearson, exhibiting the skull of one which he had killed, in which the two sets of inch-long ivory tusks polished and sharp, were adjoined with the precision of surgical scissors. "The grizzly bear," he added, "is the only animal which placed the sportsman in the same danger. An enraged moose will now and then give a hunter a serious time, but a wounded peccary will always show fight."

HOME CRAFT WEEK

April 3rd to 8th

There are two sides to a window curtain

One side the public sees from outdoors—

That side of the curtain must fill the "black box" formed by the window opening, give personality to the facade of the house, and exclude the gaze of the curious.

The other side the family sees—

That side must be sufficiently DECORATIVE for its post at the room's central feature, the window; yet sufficiently transparent not to exclude the view. It must, in other words be a window veiling, not a window shade.

All the striking window curtains which we feature have these "two sides." Come in and see them during HOME CRAFT WEEK, April 3rd to 8th.

We want you to see particularly the new lines of merchandise because of their style, "vogue" and intrinsic beauty, now being shown in the windows and at the curtain and drapery section.

The pessimist we have always with us. On every hand, in every age, are men who delight to drag a soapbox out into the streets of the world and cry out to all who will listen that mankind is on the highway to perdition. Sooner or later they are run down by traffic, in which growsome fate they find complete vindication for their theories.

The world today has many vexatious problems, but what is important to note is that it has been troubled gravely before. And it has always come out, scarred, but sound. Ever since shortly after the dawn of things there have been anarchists and reactionaries and profiteers and greedy fellows of every type, in every walk of life. They are forgotten now, as the trouble-makers of today will be forgotten in another century. Man remembers long those who serve him well. Nations have been overthrown before, and empires have expired, but mankind has kept on developing through the centuries his knowledge and faith and power.

But there is no progress through wishing. Man grows only by working. It is not enough to have faith that we shall come out of the valley of our discontent. We must have the faith that inspires work and the zeal of precept that enthruses example. If we would live again in the piping times of peace and plenty, we must labor for them.

The mortgage was the chief stock in trade of writers of the old-time melodrama and of the cheap novel that preceded it. In their hands the claim against the old homestead or the newly-built cottage of the poor but virtuous hero became a weapon as deadly as a woman's tongue. According to their way of presenting the matter, the man who put a mortgage on his land or house placed himself at the mercy of some miserly old Shylock, who thenceforth devoted himself to plotting the ruin of the mortgagee in order that he might possess himself of the property in question.

The crux of many a 10-cent matinee hinged upon the appearance of this old skinflint to dispossess the unfortunate widow or the struggling young hero on the day the mortgage fell due, with no funds in bank with which to meet it. And doubtless a lot of that sort of thing actually was practiced in real life in bygone days.

But not so now. Today the mortgage is a recognized business instrument of vital importance in 75 per cent of all real estate transactions. It is not a sign of poverty, but of thrift, and nobody forecloses a mortgage except when driven to it by dire extremity.

And so the ancient horror of the mortgage that might spell ruin has been dissipated by the understanding that the mortgage has become a means of property holding and ownership that, without it, would be impossible.

Today the operators are at the bat in the great game of publicity, soliciting the favor of the great American public in advertising and general publicity. During practically all the time that the United Mine Workers, through their officers were issuing statements for publication, the operators' associations were silent, although reply was made to some of Mr. Brophy's statements by Thomas H. Watkins. Practically all of the publicity issued by Mr. Brophy has been carried in The Progress and no doubt more will be forthcoming.

Dr. Peckwood knows just where to operate. He needs no X-ray or anything else to determine the seat of the trouble, says the American Forestry magazine. In summer he may beat the boiler working in the wood, but in winter when both insects and trees are frozen, which there is no possibility of any sound to guide him, the tree doctor always operates just where the hibernating, motionless insects lie snugly hidden in their cells.

ANNUAL MEETING AND BANQUET
About one hundred stockholders of the Workman's Cash Grocery Company gathered in the Presbyterian church Sunday School room Thursday evening to attend the annual stockholders' meeting and banquet. Shortly after eight o'clock Dr. E. C. Reeve led the way to the dining room where the Ladies' Aid Society of the church had prepared an excellent supper which was served in fine style. Following the banquet Mr. Cal Johnson, president of the company, called the meeting to order and announced that the first item of business would be the election of a chairman. Mr. Richard George, of Winburne, was nominated and elected by acclamation. Upon assuming the chair Mr. George called for reports.

The financial report was given by Wayne Norris. This report revealed the fact that the gross sales of the concern for the year 1921 amounted to more than $750,000 dollars, or a total for each store operated of nearly $60,000 for the year. The total interest on borrowed money for the year was only $174—a remarkable showing.

Resources of the company now are more than $85,000, on a stock issue of $60,000 all paid in. In the item of resources no account is made of good will, it is all real assets.

Following the financial report general Manager George Thurston made his report as to the year's difficulties and successes. He said that notwithstanding the general business slump; the writing down of inventories and loss by fire, the company was able to increase its dividend rate, which it hoped to maintain at the present figure. A large capitalization was needed. An increase of capitalization would be brought before a stockholders' meeting that would be called sometime in the month of May.

Upon the conclusion of Mr. Thurston's report the chair asked for nominations for a committee to nominate a board of directors for the ensuing year. The following were placed on this committee: C. J. Johnson, Ashley Shaw and Ord Norris. While the committee were absent preparing their report the time was spent in

"I heard something the other day in Portia City that seems pretty hard to believe, Norcross. It was at one of Mrs. Stagford's 'evenings,' and I was sitting out a dance with a certain young woman who shall be nameless. We were speaking of the Kendricks, and she gave me a rather broad hint that Mrs. Macrae isn't a widow at all; that her husband is still living."

My heavens! I had figured out a thousand ways in which the boss might get wised up to the dreadful truth, but never anything like this; to have it dropped on him that way out of a clear sky!

For a minute or two he didn't say anything, but when he did speak, I saw that the truth wasn't going to take hold.

"That is gossip, pure and simple, Hornack. The Kendricks are my friends, and I have been as intimate in their household as any outsider could be. It's merely idle gossip, I can assure you."

"Maybe so," said Mr. Hornack, sort of drawing in his horns when he saw how positive the boss was about it. "I'm not beyond admitting that the young woman who told me is a little inclined that way. But the story was pretty circumstantial; it went so far as to assert that 'Macrae' wasn't Mrs. Sheila's married name at all, and to say that her long stay with her Western cousins was—and still is—really a flight from conditions that were too humiliating to be borne."

"I don't care what was said, or who said it," the boss cut in brusquely. "It's ridiculous to suppose that any woman, and especially a woman like Sheila Macrae, would attempt to pass herself off as a widow when she wasn't one."

"I know," said the traffic manager, temporizing a little. "But on the other hand, I've never heard the major, or any one else, say outright that she was a widow. It seems to be just taken for granted. It stirred me up a bit on Van Brit's account. You don't go anywhere to mix and mingle socially, but it's the talk of the town that Upton is in over his head in that quarter."

"I shut my eyes and held my breath. Mr. Hornack hadn't the slightest idea what this lay he was skating over, or how this easy mention of Mr. Van Brit might be just like rubbing salt into a fresh cut. By this time it was growing dark, and we were running into Portia City, and I was mighty glad that it couldn't last much longer. The boss didn't speak again until the yard switches were clanking under the car, and then he said:

"Upton is well able to take care of himself, Hornack, and I don't think we need worry about him," and then over his shoulder to me: "Jimmie, it's time to wake up. We're pulling in."

As he always did on a return trip, Mr. Norcross ran up to his office to see if there was anything pressing, before he did anything else. May was still at his desk, and in answer to the boss' question he shook his head.

"No; nobody that couldn't wait," he said, referring to the day's callers. "Mr. Hatch was up with a couple of men that I didn't know, but he only wanted to inquire if you would be in the office this evening after dinner. I told him I'd find out when you came, and let him know by phone."

I thought, after all that had happened, Hatch certainly had his nerve to want to come and make a talk with the man his hired assassins were trying to murder. But if Mr. Norcross took that view of it, he didn't show it. On the contrary, he told Fred it would be all right to telephone Hatch; that he was coming down after dinner and the office would be open, as usual.

I slipped out and went to Mr. Van Brit's office at the other end of the hall. Bobby Kelso was there, holding the office down, and I asked him where I could find Tarbell. Luckily, he was able to tell me that Tarbell was at that moment down in the sturion restaurant, eating his supper; so down I went and butted in with my story of the Hatch call, and how it was to be repeated a little later on.

"I'll be there," said Tarbell; and that, load off my mind, I mugged off up-town to the club to get my own dinner.

When I broke into the grill-room at the railroad club, I found that Mr. Norcross had beaten me to it by a few minutes; that he had already ordered his dinner at a table with Major Kendrick. I suppose, by good rights, I ought to have gone off into a corner by myself, but I saw that the boss had tipped a chair at the end of the table where I usually sat, so I just went ahead and took it.

Coming in late, that way, I didn't get the first of the talk, but I took it that the boss had been saying something about his rare good luck in having the major for a table-mate two days in succession.

"The honor is mine, my dear boy," the genial old Kentuckian was telling him as I sat down. "I was by way of picking up a bit of information late this afternoon—that I thought ought to be passed on to you without any great delay."

The boss looked up quickly. "What is it, major?" he inquired. "Are you going to tell me that something new has broken loose?"

"I wish I might be that helpfully definite—I do so, Graham. But I can't. It's mostly a bit of street talk. They're telling it, over at the Commercial club, that Hatch and John Marshall—you know him—that Sedwick stock jobber who has been so active in this Citizens' Storage & Warehouse business—have finally come together."

"In a business way, you mean?"

The major gave a light and left twist to his big mustaches and shrugged one shoulder.

"They are most probably calling it business," he rejoined.

The boss nodded. "I know what has happened. In spite of the fact that the local people know that their economic salvation depends upon a wide and even distribution of their C. S. & W. stock, there has been a good bit of buying and selling and swapping around. I remember you prophesied that in a little while we'd have another trust in the hands of a few men. You may recollect that I didn't dispute your prediction. I merely said that our ground leases—the fact that all of the C. S. & W. plants and buildings are on railroad land—would still give us the whip-hand over any new monopoly that might be formed."

"Yes, sir; I remember you said that," the major allowed.

"Very good. Marshall and his pocket syndicate may have acquired a voting control in C. S. & W., and they may be willing now to patch up an alliance with Hatch. But in that case the new monopoly will still lack the one vital ingredient: the power to fix prices. If there is a new combine, and it tries to make the producers and merchants pay more than the agreed percentages for storage and handling—"

"I know," the major cut in. "You all will rise up in the majesty of your wrath and put it out of business by terminating the leases. I hope you may; I suddenly do hope you may. But you'll recollect that I didn't advise you on that point, sir. You took Misteh Ripley's opinion. Maybe the courts will hold with you, but, candidly, Graham, I doubt it—doubt it right much."

The boss didn't seem to be much scared up over the doubt. He just smiled and said we'd be likely to find out what was in the wind, and that before very long. Then he spoke of Hatch's afternoon call at our offices, and mentioned the fact that the Red Tower president would probably try again, later in the evening.

The major let the business matter drop, and he was working his way patiently through the salad course when he looked up to say:

"Was there anything in your trip to Stratheona to warrant Sheila's little telegraphic danger signal, Graham?"

"Nothing worth mentioning," said the boss, without turning a hair; doing it, as I made sure, because he didn't want Mrs. Sheila to be mixed up in the plotting business, even by implication.

The major didn't press the inquiry any farther, and when he spoke again it was of an entirely different matter. "Away along in the beginning, somebody—I think it was John Chadwick—spoke of you as a man with a saw of raw-head-and-bloody-bones temph, Graham: what have you done with that temph in these head lather days?"

The boss' smile was a good-natured grin.

"Temper is not always a matter of temperament, major. Sometimes it is only a means to an end. Much of my experience has been in the construction camps, where I have had to deal with men in the raw. Just the same, there have been moments within the past six months when I have been sorely tempted to burn the wires with a few choice words of the short and ugly variety and throw up my job."

"Which, as you may say, brings us around to President Duntun," put in the old lawyer shrewdly. "He is still opposing your policies?"

"Up to a few weeks ago he was still hounding me to do something that would boost the stock, regardless of what the something should be, or of its effect upon the permanent value of the property."

"Did I understand you to say that these—ah—suggestions from Duntun had stopped?" the major inquired.

"Temporarily," at least. I haven't heard anything from New York—not lately."

"Then Duntun's nephew hasn't made himself known to you?"

"Collingwood? Hardly. I'm not in Mr. Howie Collingwood's set—which is one of the things I have to be thankful for. But this is news: I didn't know he was out here."

The news-giver bent his head gravely in confirmation of the fact. "He's here, I'm sorry to say, Graham. He has been here quite some little time, vibratin' round with the Grigsbys and the Gannons and a lot mo' of the new-rich people up at the capital."

It was the boss' turn to go silent, and I could guess pretty well what he was thinking. The presence of President Duntun's nephew in the West might mean much or nothing. But I could imagine the boss was thinking that his own single experience with Collingwood was enough to make him wish that the nephew of 'Big Money' would stay where he belonged—among the high-rollers and spenders of his own set—in the office East.

Long before that it had been used in various communities where it was skimmed from creeks and pools as a household remedy for colds, burns, rheumatism, sore throat and other ailments.

We Want You To Know The Facts

A Statement By

The Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania

In a series of statements, of which this is the first, we want to present to you, and by you we mean the man who toils, the business man, the professional man and the miner himself, the facts and conditions leading up to and incident to the strike of the members of the U. M. W. of A., in District No. 2 now in progress.

On March 6th, 1922, Mr. B. M. Clark, President of this Association, wrote to Mr. John Brophy, President of the United Mine Workers of America of District No. 2, Clearfield, Pa., as follows:

"Please advise me at once what date will suit for conferences of our respective scale committees for the purpose of negotiating a scale effective April 1, 1922, to April 1, 1924. It is the desire of the operators, members of our association, for as early a conference as possible."

No written reply was received but on March 17, 1922, Mr. Brophy and Mr. James Marks, President and Vice President, respectively, of the U. M. W. of A., of District No. 2, called personally on Mr. Clark at Indiana, Pa., and advised him that the miners scale committee for District No. 2 would not meet the scale committee of the operators association for the purpose of negotiating a scale agreement until after a settlement had been effected between the United Mine Workers and operators of the Central Competitive field, and that from the best information he could obtain there was no probability of a joint conference in that field prior to April 1, on which date the union miners of this district would strike, or cease to work.

This declaration by Mr. Brophy was carried into effect April 1, not only in direct violation of the customs of the miners in Central Pennsylvania the past 23 years, but also in direct violation of the agreement signed by operators and United Mine Workers of District No. 2, April 26, 1920. The operators and miners of Central Pennsylvania have never taken part in the conferences of the Central Competitive field and never were parties to the wage agreements executed by the operators and miners in that field.

The operators and miners of the Central Pennsylvania field have for the past 23 years negotiated and concluded their own scale agreement governing the Central District of Pennsylvania. In violation of custom and precedent of 23 years standing the U. M. W. of A. of District No. 2, refused to meet the operators of this association to negotiate a wage scale and agreement and in violation of their contract of April 26, 1920, went on strike April 1 last.

Rule 25 of the scale agreement which expired March 31st, 1922, provides:

"In the event of a new scale agreement not having been signed on or before March 31, 1922, then and in that event the U. M. W. of A., District No. 2, will continue all men in mines regularly at work under the wages and conditions of this agreement for an additional thirty days after the date on which the Scale Committees of operators and miners hold their first meeting for the purpose of negotiating a scale to succeed this present contract, the wages paid by the operators to the miners dating from April 1st, 1922, for such portion of the 30 days work as extend beyond April 1st, 1922, shall be those that are agreed to in the next contract. * * *"

One minute after the scale agreement of April 26, 1920 expired the union miners of District No. 2 went on strike. The walkout was not delayed so much as 30 minutes, let alone the 30 days to which the miners scale committee of District No. 2, U. M. W. of A. had bound the members of its organization by solemn agreement with the Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania.

fields are actually only about 50 per cent higher than in 1914. This is because operators have made no increases in the rent of company houses. A five or six room dwelling still rents at from $7 to $12 a month. "Shelter" is 17.7 per cent of the Department of Labor's budget and shows a national increase of 69 per cent since 1914. Deducting this item of increase from the miner's budget, it will be found that he can buy as much with $1.50 today as he could with $1.00 in 1914. In other words he can live as well on a wage of 3.96 to day as he did on a wage of $2.64 in 1914.

This comparison should be borne in mind in considering the operators demand for reasonable reduction. These wage rates are forty to one hundred per cent higher than the wages paid in any other industry employing the same class of labor.

Loss of Business to Non-Union Field
The total loss of production in Central Pennsylvania during 1921 has been borne by the union mines. The loss caused by displacement of tonnage by reason of change in wage rates at other competitive mines will total 7,085,000 tons. This is a loss in addition to that caused by the business depression, and is due to the failure of the United Mine Workers of America to recognize economic conditions.

Outlook for Business
The end of the coal year, April 1, 1922, marked the beginning of the strike, also the contract making period for business next year. The future of the coal business in Central Pennsylvania depends upon the time and terms of the settlement effected on this strike ordered by the United Mine Workers of America. It is obvious to everyone that there must be radical readjustment of wages in Central Pennsylvania to meet the conditions in the surrounding coal fields with which we compete and to realize that proper basis of stabilization by securing a proper relation of wages in the mining industry as compared with wages paid in other and kindred industries.

Intermittency of Employment
The principal reason given by the United Mine Workers of America for the maintenance of the war-wage scale and their demand for a six hour day and a five day week, is intermittency of employment suffered by the miners. A great deal of the loss of working time suffered by the union mines of Central Pennsylvania during the year 1921 was caused by business being taken away from the union mines and absorbed by the mines that had made the necessary wage reductions. It is an admitted fact that the coal mining industry is overdeveloped and over-manned. The question of over-development is a matter of individual investment and the exercise of the American right to enter into any legitimate business which the operation of natural economic laws will adjust.

The excess number of men employed in the mining industry is due in a large measure to the very high wage rates paid in the coal mines of the country, as compared with the wages paid in other industry employing such a large percentage of common labor, thereby attracting men to the industry; to the fact that though coal mining is hazardous it is not unpleasant, instead it is an agreeable occupation. Coal mines today are better ventilated than large city office buildings. Sixty-four per cent of the men employed in Central Pennsylvania mines are contract miners and are to all practical intent and purpose, their own "blossoms." They have exercised the freedom of coming to work at will, leaving their place of work when they desire, lying idle on any day they wish and are practically master in their own working places. In no other industry is this great amount of freedom enjoyed by the workmen. This is a reason why men like coal mining and persist in remaining coal miners in the face of intermittency of employment. Another important reason is that in other industries when depression occurs, the usual procedure is to lay off or furlough those workmen who are not necessary to produce the decreased output, and these employees are forced to secure work in other plants or in other industries, or take their places in the ranks of the unemployed, while in the mining industry this condition does not obtain. If a mine has only 50 per cent orders, instead of laying off 50 per cent of its men and running six days a week, the 100 per cent employees work 50 per cent time, or 3 days a week. If it is only half time operation in the mining industry, all those engaged in that industry are permitted to earn the "half loaf" which is considered better than none. In addition, the mining industry, at such times is willing and is forced to give work to many men out of employment in other lines of industry in our own district during the year 1921, when other large industries laid off thousands of men, hundreds of these unemployed men found their way into the different coal mines and took their share of whatever work was to be had at the particular mine where they found employment. This condition of unselfishness in the mining industry is one of its bright spots. The operators do not wish to change it, and the mine workers would not permit it to be changed. This fact, also, is not known to the general public and has never been recognized by short sighted labor leaders. Mine workers may be employed part time, at the only mines totally unemployed are those located where the mine in the community are totally idle and they are unable to move to some other town where a mine or mines are in operation. Such cases are the exception to the rule.

Intermittency in the mining industry could be reduced and practically eliminated by the ruthless exercise of the right to reduce the working force in proportion to diminishing production as it is exercised in other industries.

Collective Bargaining
The members of the Central Coal Association have practiced the principle of collective bargaining for the last twenty-one years. We have never expressed a desire to break down the system of collective bargaining. We have expressed a desire to continue proper joint relations by requesting a joint conference with our employees. We have been denied the joint conference by the United Mine Workers of America. The failure of the United Mine Workers of America to meet the operators in joint conference repudiates the principle of collective bargaining. This is an attempt of the United Mine Workers of America to perpetuate a system of monopolistic control of wages and working conditions by forcing the majority of the operators in the United States to accept the conclusions and decisions of the joint conference conducted by a minority of the miner and operators of the country. This autocratic method of dealing with employers in other than the Central Competitive Field is due in a large measure to the check-off system by which coal operators deduct the due and assessments for the miners' union from the pay envelopes of their employees and turn the money over to the agents of the United Mine Workers of America. At the present time there is no legal responsibility on the part of labor unions of labor leaders to keep contracts with the employer and frequent violations of the contract, forcing changes in the wage schedules, have occurred during the past four years. The latest violation being when the agreement negotiated under the terms of the award of the U. S. Bituminous Coal Commission was repudiated in August, 1920 and through a series of "wildcat" strikes in the states of Illinois and Indiana, the mine workers forced the disruption of the Central Competitive Field joint conference and by these methods compelled all union districts in the United States to pay an additional $1.50 per day to day labor. Such extreme and costly violation of contract can be committed with impunity because there is no legal responsibility.

The check-off also relieves the leaders of the miners' union from the necessity of financing their Union. No other business in the United States is automatically financed. This method of collecting funds fails to develop the breadth of vision and responsible leadership in the union, which is essential to the stabilization of the industry. The demagogue and notoriety seeker, secure in their financial position, are free to appeal to passions and prejudices of the individual mine workers and are rapidly securing political control of the organization. The only responsibility, therefore, that rests upon the miners' leaders of today is a moral one. The tendency of the system practiced by them for the past twenty-five years and the lack of financial responsibility are producing a class of leaders who do not recognize moral obligations. In our opinion these factors have operated to bring about the present situation and it should be remedied by placing the requirements of financing their union upon the shoulders of the leaders. The union has had over 30 years of experience, and if it is a proper institute it should be able to secure its finances without difficulty by voluntary contributions from its members and it should not be necessary to compel involuntary contribution through the check-off system.

As a result of the foregoing facts the members of the Central Coal Association have been compelled to post the following notice addressed to their employees at their mines:

Notice
This Company notifies its employees that it protests against the infraction of our employees, to the public and to ourselves, of the strike order issued by the national officers of the United Mine Workers of America. Without our having had an opportunity to discuss a new agreement effective from April 1st. We are ready to meet our employees to discuss a new arrangement at any time.

Our Seals agreement with the United Mine Workers of America expired on March 31st, 1922. The Central Coal Association, of which this company is a member, has repeatedly requested the United Mine Workers of America of District No. 2, for a conference to negotiate a wage agreement. The United Mine Workers of America of District No. 2 have refused to meet the operators of the Central Coal Association for that purpose.

"Holy Cannon" Worshipped in Batavia.
In picturesque Batavia there is an ancient piece of ordinance half-buried in the ground, which is known as the "Holy Cannon." This is considered particularly sacred by the natives. At the breach of the cannon there is a resting of a man's wrist and hand, and a small statue is placed there. The superstition is regarded as a relic of the past, and is a source of pride to the natives. Children are often seen kneeling in prayer before the cannon, and it is said that the prayers for a family will be heard and granted.

A Stunning Sweater

The popularity of the modern sweater, as indeed of all knitted outerwear, is based not only on its wide usefulness, but on the great variety of styles that are being created continuously. There seems to be no end to the variations produced in cut, color and material, for sweaters reflect every move and fancy of Dame Fashion, and every change of season.

For the woman or girl who seeks something that reflects the spirit of spring, something characteristic of the awakening season, in lightness of weight, suitable color, and timely cut, the sweater shown here fills the need.

It is a stunning example of the popular slipover with long sleeves. It has a herring-bone stitch with five horizontal staggered Roman stripes. There are turned-back cuffs, and the round neck is hand finished. The four holes, fastened in two places at the back, lends an element of decoration with its tassel ends.

Its uses are manifold. For street wear there is nothing more chic. On lawn, porch, or at the seashore it fits in the picture, while all indications point to deeply entrenched popularity at the country club, on tennis court or golf links during the spring and summer.

Bradford Road Dispute Being Ironed Out; Lobby Against Route Denied

There was a great deal of crimination and recrimination the past couple of months regarding those two pieces of improved road in Bradford township, and before the County Commissioners finally decided to carry out the original program by building both, the residents of the different sections were making faces at each other and had almost reached the point of setting brother against brother in real civil war. All that is over now and while "peas and hominy" now reign there was once a time when a Biglerite charged John G. Maines, a Pleasant Valley route sponsor with enlisting the aid of outsiders to lobby against the Bigler route. John G., of course knew better and never did it, but to effectually and once for all nail the rumor we print the following self-explanatory letter, knowing as we do, that while Joe is not a George Washington and could main, rend, tear and dislocate the truth, did he so will, he had no reason to fall in this case and sets at rest the tale in his letter, as follows:

April 1, 1922
Mr. J. G. Maines,
Woodland, Pa.

Dear Sir:
In the matter of the Road question which you called to my attention, I beg to say that at no time did you induce the location of any road in our Township, and I don't think we ever discussed the road question, not in my knowledge. Here you are not blamed for anything in connection with the road question as far as I have been concerned, because this would be a misrepresentation of the facts.

Very truly yours,
JOS. E. PHILLIPS

The prefixes of "pseudo" and "pseud" are derived from the Greek pseudo, false, and pseudos, falsehood. Combined with other words—or forms of words—they have the following meanings: 1. A false, spurious or counterfeit condition. 2. An abnormal form of or a close resemblance to (something). 3. A resemblance in any symptoms, but a lack of the specific characters that mark the true form. 4. A false, or a non-existent geometry—as, for example, a pseudocircle.

A Sultan's Watch.
In 1884 a most elaborate watch was made—of twenty-two carat gold—for Sultan Abdul-Medjid by a firm at Cornhill. This giant watch was five inches in diameter. Though it had no bell, it chimed the hours and quarters, the striking apparatus consisting of wires. Its powerful yet pleasant tone resembled that of a cathedral clock. The cost of this wonderful thing was twelve hundred guineas.

Normal Temperature.
As defined by experts, normal temperature for any place is the temperature obtained by averaging a period of temperatures so long that further additions will not materially affect the result. Actually, however, there are only a few such long records in the country, and normal is taken to mean the average of a period of observation of selected length, usually the longest obtainable.

Brownsville, W. Mrs. Della Doyle, mother of the two boys, started a fire in the kitchen early this morning and then left the house.

HERBS USED IN MEDICINES

A Manchester, England paper urges the renewed cultivation of old fashioned medicinal herbs in English gardens. In the United States they have also gone out of fashion as a feature of the small garden, although they are imported in large quantities from Turkey, India and China, where they are grown purely for commercial purposes, as their medicinal value is recognized by many leading physicians. Tons of medicinal herbs are used annually in the preparation of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most successful medicine for women's ills. It contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and women afflicted with such ailments should try it.

Olive Introduced into America.
During the course of the emigration to the new-found land, the Spaniards brought the seeds of the olive tree with them. As far as historical and eminent agriculturists can determine, the olive tree was not a habitant of the western hemisphere, and since it had been known to have been transplanted all over the Mediterranean region, it is not unreasonable to suppose its origin in this country can be attributed to its having been brought here.

OPERATORS RESENT INTERFERENCE OF CONGRESS IN SETTLEMENT OF STRIKE; WILL REFUSE TO ENTER CONFERENCE

Indiana And Illinois Operators Agree To Refuse
Invitation Of Congressmen To Meet Mr.
Lewis—Says No Agreement Now Exists And
They Are Free Agents.

QUIET REIGNS IN ALL STRIKE AREAS

Chicago, Illinois, April 5.—Coal mine operators today planned a flat turn-down of the Government's offer to settle the miners' strike. Mine owners in Indiana and Illinois have agreed to refuse to accept the invitation of the Labor Committee of the House of Representatives to meet April 10th with John L. Lewis. The attitude of the operators towards the invitation of the House committee was learned today from one of the highest officials of the organization of mine owners. He reviewed the attitude of the operators as follows: "We do not understand what right Congress has to interfere in this dispute. We have no contract with the miners' union now and have not had since April 1st. Our old agreement expired on that date."

CONGRESSMEN WILL STICK TO TASK.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—The House Labor Committee, today awaiting responses to its invitations to operators in the central competitive field to attend a conference in Washington, today gave notice to the country that it would not cease its efforts until a settlement of the dispute is effected. "We are going to stick to this thing until we have reached a solution," Representative Bland, Republican of Indiana, declared today. Representative Nolan, Republican of California, Chairman of the committee, expressed a similar determination. He was the originator of the plan towards which the country was looking for a solution. If all present plans fail the House will probably fall back on the Federal Committee of Investigation provided by the Bland resolution.

New York, N. Y., April 5.—Eugene K. Martin, a wounded war veteran, tuned up his radio receiving set and then turned on the gas in his apartment. To the music of a jazz band brought to him through the receiving set, Martin inhaled the deadly fumes and scrawled his farewell message to friends. Police found him dead in front of the set, the audio tube still aglow, showing the apparatus was still receiving.

Harding Plans General House Clean- ing Of Democrats To Get Effi- ciency On His Policies.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—A general house-cleaning that will remove at least 2,000 prominent employees with Democratic leanings or views hostile to the views of the administration, has been decided upon as a sequel to the summary dismissal by the President of twenty-nine Bureau of Engraving chiefs. The President, it is said, has determined to obtain the highest efficiency of Government employees and that the most important positions must not be held by Democrats or others not favoring his plans. He believes that while this policy may meet with some opposition at first it will be approved in the long run.

OPTIMISTIC REPORT ON GLASS, STEEL AND ALLIED TRADE

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 5.—(U. P.)—July and August will see the peak of prosperity in Pittsburgh's steel, glass and allied industries, leaders here predict.

Although many plants show a 25 per cent increase in production over last year, another three months will be necessary before the long delayed business boom will have arrived. Thousands of men, on part time employment or out of work for a year and a half will again be enjoying at least partial prosperity, even at somewhat lower wages.

A survey of the iron and steel industry shows a rapid movement toward normalcy. Some plants such as the National Tube and the McKeesport Tinsplate are operating on a 100 per cent basis. Schedules at Homestead and Braddock have been increased and the same is true of the big steel plants at Duquesne, Monaca and Clairton. Jones & Laughlin Pittsburgh Steel and others report increased production.

The plate glass industry is operating at about 90 per cent capacity, this being virtually normal, it is said. "The plate glass business has already come back to what may be regarded as a normal basis," declared Captain Charles W. Brown, of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. Conditions in the window glass trade are showing constant improvement, with local plants running at about 75 per cent of capacity as compared with 25 per cent a year ago.

"We are very optimistic as to the future," said G. H. Mayer, general sales manager of the American Window Glass Company, "and we feel that as soon as the spring building movement gets under way there will be a greatly increased demand for window glass products."

The United States Glass Company is operating its plants at about 65 per cent capacity. Marion Dryce, an official, said domestic trade is showing a gradual improvement, although foreign demand was slow.

Mrs. Benjamin Sykes has recovered from a recent illness.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—Investigation of charges of "waste", inefficiency and extra "vagance", as well as "partisanship and favoritism to political lawyers, agents and lobbyists" in connection with the tax work of the Internal Revenue Bureau was started in a resolution introduced in the Senate today.

Contrary to previous understanding, there WILL be a regular meeting of the Rotary Club Thursday evening, April 6th at the Jordan hotel, 6 o'clock P. M.

This meeting is for the specific purpose of hearing Dr. J. Hayes Woolridge speak on the prevention of goiter a matter all too important to postpone. Dr. Woolridge has given a great deal of time and study to this subject and has definite suggestions and information that will be good news in this community if brought before our people.

BRITAIN POLITELY DEMANDS FRANCE PAY INDEBTEDNESS

Paris, France, April 5.—The French Government has received a note from England which is considered tantamount to a demand for immediate payment of the interest on France's debt to Britain of $2,500,000,000. Marquis Curzon, British Foreign Minister, indicated that Britain could not renew the three year convention of 1919, whereby France was permitted to postpone payment of interest due to war time loans. The whole question of inter-allied debts and of European debts to America may be brought up at Genoa as a result of this action of Britain. France, it was stated, will reply to England that it is impossible for her to consider payment of her debt apart from the whole program of European debts, including those owed by Germany.

SHERIFF GORMAN IS DISSATISFIED WITH THE AUDITORS TOO

Files Appeal Today And
Court Will Be Asked
To Untangle Claims In
Triangular Dispute.

ITEMS SET FORTH

County Auditors in Clearfield county, like the famed Dodo, is an extinct species nowadays following the establishment of a County Controller. The County Auditors ended their official life with the completion of last year's audit and while every body appears to be satisfied with the superseding of the Auditors by the Controller, nobody appears to be either pleased or satisfied with the findings of the Auditors on their last attempt in 1921.

The first uprising against the 1921 Auditors report occurred last week when the County Commissioners appealed from the settlement with Ex-Sheriff A. M. Gorman, alleging that too much money was allowed the Sheriff on some fifteen items, totaling something like $7900. As a matter of course there was not that much money involved in the objections, but specific objection were raised to certain charges making up that total, which, as a matter of course, makes the amount of money involved in dispute very much less than the total of all the items enumerated.

This morning the "shoe is on the other foot" and we find Ex-Sheriff Gorman, through his attorneys, Smith & Smith and A. M. Liveright, also appealing from the award of the County Auditors. In his appeal Sheriff Gorman specifies no less than nine different items wherein he alleges the County Auditors erred in reducing his bills. These items and the amounts actually involved in each case are as follows:

- 1 Error is claimed in the deduction of $1.00 from the bill or advertising general election proclamation.
- 2 In deducting $4.50 on fees charged on commitments.
- 3 In reducing his fees for summoning jurors $34
- 4 By deducting $688.28 from his bill for executing warrants and Commonwealth subpoenas.
- 5 In deducting $400 from bill for taking prisoners to Western Penitentiary
- 6 In deducting $79.75 from his bill for indictments and Commonwealth costs.
- 7 In reducing bill for boarding prisoners from 10,781 days at 50c per day to 10,714 days or $33.50.
- 8 In deducting $45.17 from the total credits allowed, which should have been $11,275.90.
- 9 In limiting total balance due Gorman for two years—1920-1921—to the sum of $11,381.04 when the amount of such balance is dependent upon the determination of the proceedings as to the 1920 settlement in which appeals are now pending before the Court and upon determination of the items appealed from.

Betrayer Of Edith Cavell, Brave English Nurse, Is Given Death Sentence

Mons, Belgium, April 5.—An echo of one of the world war's most poignant tragedies was the sentence of death passed here yesterday against the traitor Jernos, who betrayed Edith Cavell into the hands of the Germans. A public execution of the condemned man, against whom the entire community has declared undying hate, will take place here immediately. Jernos, whose betrayal of the nurse to the enemy resulted in her execution, is being closely guarded against attempts at lynching.

"Unwritten Code" Of The West Will Be Invoked To Save John P. Day, Jurist, From Hangman

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, April 5.—The "unwritten code" of Oklahoma will be invoked to clear Judge John P. Day, millionaire oil man and politician, from blame in the killing of Lieutenant Colonel Paul Ward Beck, the handsome commandant of Post Flying Field. The code, which has been handed down from famous previous times in the southwest, provides that a man's home is inviolate. "Could any red-blooded American have done anything else," asked Day, in reviewing his story that he returned home from escorting guests from the party and through a high French window of his mansion saw Mrs. Day, beautiful Oklahoma and Washington society matron, struggling to free herself from the dashing aviator. Mrs. Day, hysterical from the tragedy and under the care of physicians, substantiated her husband's story. A half dozen mystery angles were injected into the killing today, but authorities said they would attempt to iron them out at the Coroner's inquest on Saturday afternoon.

Mahaffey Man Loses His Case Against McCordle Family On Assault Plea

The Punxsutawney Spirit of Tuesday had the following to say concerning the action of the Jefferson county criminal court in session at Brookville:

In the case of Merle Hoover, of Mahaffey, against Frank and Ward McCordle, of Cloe, in which the McCordles were charged with aggravated a. and b., the jury found the defendants not guilty and directed the prosecutor to pay all the costs. In this case young Hoover claimed to have gone to Rossiter where he obtained some bad liquor. He started home and when he got to Cloe was put off the train because he had no money with which to pay his fare. He is alleged to have entered the McCordle home there without any apparent reason and was given a beating by Mr. McCordle and his 12-year old son Ward. Hoover was confined to the Punxsutawney hospital for about ten days following the affair. Mr. and Mrs. McCordle called on Hoover while in the hospital and made an offer to defray his expenses.

The appeal concludes by asking that an issue be awarded to try and determine the several matters in dispute.

Costs Must Be Paid In Memorable Slander Suit From Cooper Township

The last chapter, but one, in that Cooper township slander suit, wherein by agreement reached between the parties. Miss Lillie Young, of Kylertown, was awarded damages to the extent of six Lincoln pennies on account of certain smashes or dents hammered into the plaintiff's character or reputation by the tongue or her neighbor, Mrs. Verne Rothrock.

The verbal assault upon which the slander suit was brought by Miss Young occurred about one year ago and the matter had been in the courts since that time. When the verdict arrived at following the agreement between the attorneys and the parties each litigant was directed to pay the costs she had incurred incident to the prosecution, that being due to the fact that in a damage suit where the verdict amounts to but six cents the costs do not follow the verdict, as in all cases where the amount recovered is beyond that sum.

In this case the costs, amount to $32.80 which will require Miss Young to come forward with $16.40, while Mrs. Rothrock must separate herself from $16.40. The payment of these costs will be the final chapter in this battle and will close the incident.

..: PRESIDENT OF COAL ASSOCIATION TELLS HIS SIDE OF THE STORY ..:

G. Webb Shillingford, President of the Central Coal Association of Altoona, an organization of coal operators recognizing union labor, issued the following statement protesting against the injustice and unfairness of the strike order of the United Mine Workers of America as it affects Central Pennsylvania:—

On April 1st, a strike of the 43,000 union mine workers of Central Pennsylvania began as directed by the United Mine Workers of America. This strike will affect every community in Pennsylvania where union labor is employed and this comprises the large majority of the industrial workers in Cambria, Clearfield, Jefferson, Huntingdon, Centre, Elk and Tioga Counties. The effect of this strike will be felt by every business and family resident in those counties. It is therefore proper that the members of the Central Coal Association, an organization of coal operators employing 15,000 men make a statement of the facts to the public.

Important Facts

1. This strike has been called by the United Mine Workers of America regardless of the fact that up until the present moment no demands of any kind or character whatever have been made by the representatives of the miners' union upon the operators of this district. No request for a joint meeting or conference had been made upon the operators by the miners for the purpose of negotiating a wage agreement to replace the agreement which expired on March 31. This arbitrary action on the part of the United Mine Workers is taken because the operators of Pittsburgh and the operators of Ohio refuse to participate in what is known as the Central Competitive Field Joint Conference. This conference is composed of the miners and operators of Ohio, Indiana

Illinois and the Pittsburgh District of Pennsylvania. The miners and operators of Central Pennsylvania were never participants in the Central Competitive Field joint conference and have no relation whatever, to it. You are witnessing the miners' strike in this district being called upon strike because an outside body composed of miners and operators from different states have not met in joint conference as requested by the United Mine Workers of America.

2. The Operators' Association of Central Pennsylvania have expressed a willingness to meet the United Mine Workers of District No. 2 to negotiate a wage agreement to replace the one expiring March 31st, 1922. The operators of Pennsylvania have practiced the principles of collective bargaining for the past twenty-one years and have sought on this occasion to continue the application of these principles; to secure a conference for the purpose of learning whether or not it was possible to negotiate a large agreement with their employees conforming to economic and competitive conditions affecting our district, and upon which those mines that were in operation could continue to work and the mines that were closed down would be able to secure business in the competitive markets and resume operation; and to maintain and secure for Central Pennsylvania that share of the coal business of Pennsylvania to which it is justly entitled, upon which the prosperity of every community in the central part of our state largely depends.

3. The Central Competitive Field joint conference should not influence the miners and operators of Central Pennsylvania. We protest against the United Mine Workers of America pursuing a policy of making a wage agreement with the Central Competitive Field in which we have no voice and no vote, and upon the conclusion of such agreement compelling the operators and mine workers of Central Pennsylvania to accept its terms and decisions. This policy has been pursued by the United Mine Workers for the past twenty-five years, and the constant and recurrent strikes in the bituminous coal industry grow out of this plan of settlement—which permits a small and highly centralized body of miners and operators to exert a monopolistic control over wage and working conditions in the entire industry. This body (the Central Competitive Field) composes about 35 per cent of the miners and production of the country. The Central Pennsylvania coal operators desire to base their wage schedule upon the market and competitive conditions affecting their own district. They are denied this opportunity and their miners are called on strike without the operators having been officially notified of the

A brief survey of the wage advancement granted to men employed underground in District No. 2, Central Pennsylvania, during the past 10 years will give the public the clearest background for sizing up the merits of the present wage controversy in the bituminous field.

CURWENSVILLE

We are indebted to Prof. Grant Norris for a copy of the High School Annual. We have perused its pages with a great deal of interest and pleasure. It is impossible to make comparisons for it is the first of its kind in this Community, but we feel safe in saying that none in the future will be a greater success than this pioneer of Journalism in Curwensville High School fostered by the class of '22. New to the work, amateurs at editorials, beginning with Miss Elizabeth King, Editor-in-chief, down through the list of Associate Editors, Historians, Poets, Artist and Prophets, each has assumed the task assigned in that same spirit which has actuated them thru their school life, The Spirit not of "I'll try" but "I Will," and each has accomplished its completion, far surpassing our expectations. It is indeed a volume worthy of connoisseurs and a credit to the class. The editorials are short and pithy, timely and to the point. In the light of the success of The Annual as a whole, we can over look the slight imperfections which such a volume must necessarily contain, and shoulder them wholesale upon the printer whose divine prerogative it is to make mistakes.

We cannot refrain from attention to Byron McDowell's pen sketches which are to be found on various pages. He has proven himself an artist indeed.

The Alumni Directory, in charge of Miss Elizabeth Wall, ably assisted by Miss Lois Vaughn is a heart appeal to each alumnus and tends to bring back the tender memories of Alma Mater.

The Curwensville Directory, edited by Miss Cora Wolf, assisted by Misses Lucy Brunetti and Elida Yacobi fills a long felt want in our town literature and is most complete. In fact there is not a dull page from first to last. It abounds in fun and witticisms, not forgetting the more serious side. Even the advertisements prove interesting reading, showing most plainly how deep a place is held by our schools in the hearts of our merchants and how willingly they support anything sponsored by our Public Schools.

The class of '22 has made Curwensville proud, and while space forbids a more lengthy review, we commend the Annual in every particular and prophecy for it a space among our books so long as memory lasts.

The home of C. O. Norris is under quarantine for Scarlet fever. The victim being little Emma Louise Bloom, Mr. Norris' little granddaughter.

A delightful surprise was held at the home of John Haupt, on South Side last evening in honor of his daughter, Miss Zelda's birthday. All who were present thoroughly enjoyed the affair and left at a late hour, wishing Miss Haupt many happy returns of the day.

tells the story of ATLANTIC superiority

Speed when you want it, power when you need it—dependable performance always! That is the story you get from Atlantic Gasoline, no matter where or when you buy it.

Atlantic has range! It isn't simply a fair-weather gasoline. Its long and uniform "chain of boiling points" gives it all the elements for action and all the elements for power required to meet every speed, load, temperature or other operating condition.

You need no scientific analysis to discover Atlantic's absolute day-in-and-day-out superiority as a fuel for present-day motors. Performance will tell you that!

Starting will prove that Atlantic vaporizes and ignites easily. Getaway, pickup and hill climbing will show that Atlantic is packed with stamina. Mileage and the long-continued, carbonless smoothness of your motor will give you positive evidence that Atlantic burns completely—that every possible heat-containing fraction is developed into live, wheel-turning energy.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Can human brains win in the great struggle that the insect is waging on the very existence of civilization.

That is the question that is now agitating British men of science. Professor Harold Maxwell Lefroy England's leading entomologist, has brought forward fourteen instances of the terrible ravages now being committed by insects throughout the world. His main example is the Argentine ant, which eats babies.

This insect first reached England in 1918, after having spread over half the world, especially Spain, since 1897. It has not merely devoured infants in their cradles in the Argentine, but it has completely wiped out the birds of Maderia by eating their nestlings and is ruining the orange and coffee harvests throughout the Eastern and Western Hemispheres.

It often kills the plants, not directly, but by encouraging other insects, especially the green fly, which it keeps as a man keeps cows. It even builds houses for them, acts as doctor, to them and defends them from enemies.

At the same time the ant, which is omnivorous, carries and spreads many of the worst human diseases. There is every fear that it may find a congenial home in London.

Professor Lefroy next instances the boll weevil, which attacks the cotton plant. After twenty years of research no preventive has been found against the insect, whose ravages are so well known throughout the cotton-growing areas. The professor agrees with the best American opinion that the next five years will see practically no cotton grown in America, and he anticipates that the world will be at least 7,000,000 bales short annually.

These are not the worst of the evils. Other instances that Professor Lefroy gives are:

The flea has caused 7,000,000 deaths in India by carrying plague.

The housefly kills 1,000 children in England every year by imparting infant diarrhoea. Houseflies, he says, are as numerous as they were 500 years ago; they carry typhoid, enteric, cholera and dysentery.

The British system of sanitation in Mesopotamia was ideally designed. When I was eight years old I had a beau. One day he gave me a ring, which I prized very much. When I was at his house one day his mother saw the ring. She had been looking all over for it. Needless to say I gave her the ring and she gave Johnny something. That ended my first love affair.—Chicago Journal.

Enjoying Other Men's Minds.
I dedicate no inconsiderable portion of my time to other people's thoughts. I dream away my life in others' speculations. I love to lose myself in other men's minds. When I am not walking, I am reading; I cannot sit and think. Books think for me.—Lamb.

A number of women are on the verge of "breakdown" because of the prevalence of the "black box" house mite.

The beetle that destroyed the ancient oak roof of Westminster Hall is slowly but surely destroying St. Paul's and all the other ancient buildings of London.

The louse is the cause of typhus and all the other plagues in Russia and will wipe out nations if conditions prevent cleanliness.

Will intellectual man win against these blind insects? As Professor Lefroy. He is sufficiently optimistic to believe that he will, but that it will need all the energies of applied science for years to come to secure the victory.

One inference drawn by Professor Lefroy is the urgent necessity for establishing new cotton growing areas within the British Empire.

"There is no time to lose," he says. "Before the war the United States produced half the world's raw cotton. Her output has fallen from fourteen million bales to seven million bales and threatens to vanish under the peril of the boll weevil."

For the benefit largely of our friends Dr. Leopold and Harry E. Dowler, who have recently been exploring old Democratic Texas, and for the general information it contains, we publish the following story:

The rattlesnake catchers of the Brownsville, Texas, district are going through a period of severe depression as live snakes at present are bringing only 8 cents a pound, according to T. Gilbert Pearson, President of the National Association of Ambubuh Societies, who has returned from the work of staking out a proposed 150,000-acre tract in the southern tip of Texas as a game and bird sanctuary.

The greatest rattlesnake establishment in the world is maintained near Brownsville by a dealer named King, known as "Rattlesnake King". He had more than 100,000 rattlers in stock during December, Mr. Pearson said. These are sold to zoological gardens, snake charmers, circuses, naturalists and snake-lovers all over the country, but the demand has recently become low. Many Mexicans earn their living catching rattlers and are glad to get even 8 cents a pound for them.

Mr. Pearson's mission was undertaken at the request of the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of mapping out a great game reserve in the extreme south of Texas, where a stretch of sandhills exist on which are found between twenty and thirty species of birds including game birds not found elsewhere in the United States.

The 150,000-acre tract laid out by Mr. Pearson includes a large lake called Laguna de Santa in Kleberg County on the King ranch, the largest ranch in the United States, which embraces more than 1,400,000 acres and is twice the size of the State of Rhode Island.

Besides being a bird sanctuary, this will be a refuge for the collared peccary, known as the wild pig, though it is not precisely a pig. It is like a cross between an antelope and a wild boar. It has been hunted so much by Mexicans for the hide and bristles that it is in danger of ultimate extinction, according to Mr. Pearson. He said that it had been decided at a conference of sportsmen which he attended in Texas to seek legislation protecting the peccary.

"It is the gamiest and most dangerous wild animal in the United States," said Mr. Pearson, exhibiting the skull of one which he had killed, in which the two sets of inch-long ivory tusks polished and sharp, were adjoined with the precision of surgical scissors. "The grizzly bear," he added, "is the only animal which placed the sportsman in the same danger. An enraged moose will now and then give a hunter a serious time, but a wounded peccary will always show fight."

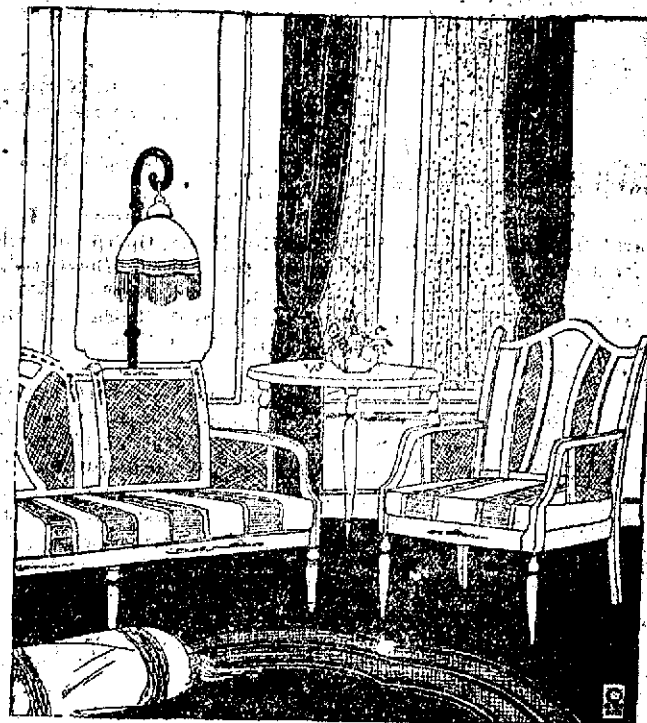

That's what these alarm clocks of ours say in a very positive manner. There's no turning over and taking another "forty winks," you are dragged out of bed, figuratively speaking, by the insistent little alarm.

HOME CRAFT WEEK

April 3rd to 8th

There are two sides to a window curtain

One side the public sees from outdoors—

That side of the curtain must fill the "black box" formed by the window opening, give personality to the facade of the house, and exclude the gaze of the curious.

The other side the family sees—

That side must be sufficiently DECORATIVE for its post at the room's central feature, the window; yet sufficiently transparent not to exclude the view. It must, in other words be a window veiling, not a window shade.

All the striking window curtains which we feature have these "two sides." Come in and see them during HOME CRAFT WEEK, April 3rd to 8th.

The pessimist we have always with us. On every hand, in every age, are men who delight to drag a soapbox out into the streets of the world and cry out to all who will listen that mankind is on the highway to perdition. Sooner or later they are run down by traffic, in which growsome fate they find complete vindication for their theories.

The world today has many vexatious problems, but what is important to note is that it has been troubled gravely before. And it has always come out, scarred, but sound. Ever since shortly after the dawn of things there have been anarchists and reactionaries and profiteers and greedy fellows of every type, in every walk of life. They are forgotten now, as the trouble-makers of today will be forgotten in another century. Man remembers long those who serve him well. Nations have been overthrown before, and empires have expired, but mankind has kept on developing through the centuries his knowledge and faith and power.

But there is no progress through wishing. Man grows only by working. It is not enough to have faith that we shall come out of the valley of our discontent. We must have the faith that inspires work and the zeal of precept that enthruses example. If we would live again in the piping times of peace and plenty, we must labor for them.

The mortgage was the chief stock in trade of writers of the old-time melodrama and of the cheap novel that preceded it. In their hands the claim against the old homestead or the newly-built cottage of the poor but virtuous hero became a weapon as deadly as a woman's tongue. According to their way of presenting the matter, the man who put a mortgage on his land or house placed himself at the mercy of some miserly old Shylock, who thenceforth devoted himself to plotting the ruin of the mortgagee in order that he might possess himself of the property in question.

The crux of many a 10-cent matinee hinged upon the appearance of this old skinflint to dispossess the unfortunate widow or the struggling young hero on the day the mortgage fell due, with no funds in bank with which to meet it. And doubtless a lot of that sort of thing actually was practiced in real life in bygone days.

But not so now. Today the mortgage is a recognized business instrument of vital importance in 75 per cent of all real estate transactions. It is not a sign of poverty, but of thrift, and nobody forecloses a mortgage except when driven to it by dire extremity.

And so the ancient horror of the mortgage that might spell ruin has been dissipated by the understanding that the mortgage has become a means of property holding and ownership that, without it, would be impossible.

Today the operators are at the bat in the great game of publicity, soliciting the favor of the great American public in advertising and general publicity. During practically all the time that the United Mine Workers, through their officers were issuing statements for publication, the operators' associations were silent, although reply was made to some of Mr. Brophy's statements by Thomas H. Watkins. Practically all of the publicity issued by Mr. Brophy has been carried in The Progress and no doubt more will be forthcoming.

ANNUAL MEETING AND BANQUET

About one hundred stockholders of the Workman's Cash Grocery Company gathered in the Presbyterian church Sunday School room Thursday evening to attend the annual stockholders' meeting and banquet. Shortly after eight o'clock Dr. E. C. Reeve led the way to the dining room where the Ladies' Aid Society of the church had prepared an excellent supper which was served in fine style. Following the banquet Mr. Cal Johnson, president of the company, called the meeting to order and announced that the first item of business would be the election of a chairman. Mr. Richard George, of Winburne, was nominated and elected by acclamation. Upon assuming the chair Mr. George called for reports.

The financial report was given by Wayne Norris. This report revealed the fact that the gross sales of the concern for the year 1921 amounted to more than $750,000 dollars, or a total for each store operated of nearly $60,000 for the year. The total interest on borrowed money for the year was only $174—a remarkable showing.

Resources of the company now are more than $85,000, on a stock issue of $60,000 all paid in. In the item of resources no account is made of good will, it is all real assets.

Following the financial report general Manager George Thurston made his report as to the year's difficulties and successes. He said that notwithstanding the general business slump; the writing down of inventories and loss by fire, the company was able to increase its dividend rate, which it hoped to maintain at the present figure. A large capitalization was needed. An increase of capitalization would be brought before a stockholders' meeting that would be called sometime in the month of May.

Upon the conclusion of Mr. Thurston's report the chair asked for nominations for a committee to nominate a board of directors for the ensuing year. The following were placed on this committee: C. J. Johnson, Ashley Shaw and Ord Norris. While the committee were absent preparing their report the time was spent in

"I heard something the other day in Portia City that seems pretty hard to believe, Norcross. It was at one of Mrs. Stagford's 'evenings,' and I was sitting out a dance with a certain young woman who shall be nameless. We were speaking of the Kendricks, and she gave me a rather broad hint that Mrs. Macrae isn't a widow at all; that her husband is still living."

My heavens! I had figured out a thousand ways in which the boss might get wised up to the dreadful truth, but never anything like this; to have it dropped on him that way out of a clear sky!

For a minute or two he didn't say anything, but when he did speak, I saw that the truth wasn't going to take hold.

"That is gossip, pure and simple, Hornack. The Kendricks are my friends, and I have been as intimate in their household as any outsider could be. It's merely idle gossip, I can assure you."

"Maybe so," said Mr. Hornack, sort of drawing in his horns when he saw how positive the boss was about it. "I'm not beyond admitting that the young woman who told me is a little inclined that way. But the story was pretty circumstantial; it went so far as to assert that 'Macrae' wasn't Mrs. Sheila's married name at all, and to say that her long stay with her Western cousins was—and still is—really a flight from conditions that were too humiliating to be borne."

"I don't care what was said, or who said it," the boss cut in brusquely. "It's ridiculous to suppose that any woman, and especially a woman like Sheila Macrae, would attempt to pass herself off as a widow when she wasn't one."

"I know," said the traffic manager, temporizing a little. "But on the other hand, I've never heard the major, or any one else, say outright that she was a widow. It seems to be just taken for granted. It stirred me up a bit on Van Brit's account. You don't go anywhere to mix and mingle socially, but it's the talk of the town that Upton is in over his head in that quarter."

"I shut my eyes and held my breath. Mr. Hornack hadn't the slightest idea what this lay he was skating over, or how this easy mention of Mr. Van Brit might be just like rubbing salt into a fresh cut. By this time it was growing dark, and we were running into Portia City, and I was mighty glad that it couldn't last much longer. The boss didn't speak again until the yard switches were clanking under the car, and then he said:

"Upton is well able to take care of himself, Hornack, and I don't think we need worry about him," and then over his shoulder to me: "Jimmie, it's time to wake up. We're pulling in."

As he always did on a return trip, Mr. Norcross ran up to his office to see if there was anything pressing, before he did anything else. May was still at his desk, and in answer to the boss' question he shook his head.

"No; nobody that couldn't wait," he said, referring to the day's callers. "Mr. Hatch was up with a couple of men that I didn't know, but he only wanted to inquire if you would be in the office this evening after dinner. I told him I'd find out when you came, and let him know by phone."

I thought, after all that had happened, Hatch certainly had his nerve to want to come and make a talk with the man his hired assassins were trying to murder. But if Mr. Norcross took that view of it, he didn't show it. On the contrary, he told Fred it would be all right to telephone Hatch; that he was coming down after dinner and the office would be open, as usual.

I slipped out and went to Mr. Van Brit's office at the other end of the hall. Bobby Kelso was there, holding the office down, and I asked him where I could find Tarbell. Luckily, he was able to tell me that Tarbell was at that moment down in the sturion restaurant, eating his supper; so down I went and butted in with my story of the Hatch call, and how it was to be repeated a little later on.

"I'll be there," said Tarbell; and that, that load off my mind, I mugged off up-town to the club to get my own dinner.

When I broke into the grill-room at the railroad club, I found that Mr. Norcross had beaten me to it by a few minutes; that he had already ordered his dinner at a table with Major Kendrick. I suppose, by good rights, I ought to have gone off into a corner by myself, but I saw that the boss had tipped a chair at the end of the table where I usually sat, so I just went ahead and took it.

Coming in late, that way, I didn't get the first of the talk, but I took it that the boss had been saying something about his rare good luck in having the major for a table-mate two days in succession.

"The honor is mine, my dear boy," the genial old Kentuckian was telling him as I sat down. "I was by way of picking up a bit of information late this afternoon—that I thought ought to be passed on to you without any great delay."

The boss looked up quickly. "What is it, major?" he inquired. "Are you going to tell me that something new has broken loose?"

"I wish I might be that helpfully definite—I do so, Graham. But I can't. It's mostly a bit of street talk. They're telling it, oveh at the Commercial club, that Hatch and John Marshall—you know him—that Sedwick stock jobber who has been so active in this Citizens' Storage & Warehouse business—have finally come together."

"In a business way, you mean?"

The major gave a light and left twist to his big mustaches and shrugged one shoulder.

"They are most probably calling it business," he rejoined.

The boss nodded. "I know what has happened. In spite of the fact that the local people know that their economic salvation depends upon a wide and even distribution of their C. S. & W. stock, there has been a good bit of buying and selling and swapping around. I remember you prophesied that in a little while we'd have another trust in the hands of a few men. You may recollect that I didn't dispute your prediction. I merely said that our ground leases—the fact that all of the C. S. & W. plants and buildings are on railroad land—would still give us the whip-hand over any new monopoly that might be formed."

"Yes, sir; I remember you said that," the major allowed. "Very good. Marshall and his pocket syndicate may have acquired a voting control in C. S. & W., and they may be willing now to patch up an alliance with Hatch. But in that case the new monopoly will still lack the one vital ingredient: the power to fix prices. If there is a new combine, and it tries to make the producers and merchants pay more than the agreed percentages for storage and handling—"

"I know," the major cut in. "You all will rise up in the majesty of your wrath and put it out of business by terminating the leases. I hope you may; I suddenly do hope you may. But you'll recollect that I didn't advise you on that point, sir. You took Misteh Ripley's opinion. Maybe the courts will hold with you, but, candidly, Graham, I doubt it—doubt it right much."

The boss didn't seem to be much scared up over the doubt. He just smiled and said we'd be likely to find out what was in the wind, and that before very long. Then he spoke of Hatch's afternoon call at our offices, and mentioned the fact that the Red Tower president would probably try again, later in the evening.

The major let the business matter drop, and he was working his way patiently through the salad course when he looked up to say:

"Was there anything in your trip to Stratheona to warrant Sheila's little telegraphic danger signal, Graham?"

"Nothing worth mentioning," said the boss, without turning a hair; doing it, as I made sure, because he didn't want Mrs. Sheila to be mixed up in the plotting business, even by implication.

The major didn't press the inquiry any farther, and when he spoke again it was of an entirely different matter. "Away along in the beginning, somebody—I think it was John Chadwick—spoke of you as a man with a saw of raw-head-and-bloody-bones temph, Graham: what have you done with that temph in these heah latched days?"

The boss' smile was a good-natured grin.

"Temper is not always a matter of temperament, major. Sometimes it is only a means to an end. Much of my experience has been in the construction camps, where I have had to deal with men in the raw. Just the same, there have been moments within the past six months when I have been sorely tempted to burn the wires with a few choice words of the short and ugly variety and throw up my job."

"Which, as you may say, brings us around to President Duntun," put in the old lawyer shrewdly. "He is still opposing your policies?"

"Up to a few weeks ago he was still hounding me to do something that would boost the stock, regardless of what the something should be, or of its effect upon the permanent value of the property."

"Did I understand you to say that these—ah—suggestions from Duntun had stopped?" the major inquired.

"Temporarily," at least. I haven't heard anything from New York—not lately."

"Then Duntun's nephew hasn't made himself known to you?"

"Collingwood? Hardly. I'm not in Mr. Howie Collingwood's set—which is one of the things I have to be thankful for. But this is news: I didn't know he was out here."

The news-giver bent his head gravely in confirmation of the fact. "He's heah, I'm sorry to say, Graham. He has been heah quite some little time, vibratin' round with the Grigsbys and the Gannons and a lot mo' of the new-rich people up at the capital."

It was the boss' turn to go silent, and I could guess pretty well what he was thinking. The presence of President Duntun's nephew in the West might mean much or nothing. But I could imagine the boss was thinking that his own single experience with Collingwood was enough to make him wish that the nephew of 'Big Money' would stay where he belonged—among the high-rollers and spenders of his own set—in the office East.

In a series of statements, of which this is the first, we want to present to you, and by you we mean the man who toils, the business man, the professional man and the miner himself, the facts and conditions leading up to and incident to the strike of the members of the U. M. W. of A., in District No. 2 now in progress.

On March 6th, 1922, Mr. B. M. Clark, President of this Association, wrote to Mr. John Brophy, President of the United Mine Workers of America of District No. 2, Clearfield, Pa., as follows:

"Please advise me at once what date will suit for conferences of our respective scale committees for the purpose of negotiating a scale effective April 1, 1922, to April 1, 1924. It is the desire of the operators, members of our association, for as early a conference as possible."

No written reply was received but on March 17, 1922, Mr. Brophy and Mr. James Marks, President and Vice President, respectively, of the U. M. W. of A., of District No. 2, called personally on Mr. Clark at Indiana, Pa., and advised him that the miners scale committee for District No. 2 would not meet the scale committee of the operators association for the purpose of negotiating a scale agreement until after a settlement had been effected between the United Mine Workers and operators of the Central Competitive field, and that from the best information he could obtain there was no probability of a joint conference in that field prior to April 1, on which date the union miners of this district would strike, or cease to work.

This declaration by Mr. Brophy was carried into effect April 1, not only in direct violation of the customs of the miners in Central Pennsylvania the past 23 years, but also in direct violation of the agreement signed by operators and United Mine Workers of District No. 2, April 26, 1920. The operators and miners of Central Pennsylvania have never taken part in the conferences of the Central Competitive field and never were parties to the wage agreements executed by the operators and miners in that field.

The operators and miners of the Central Pennsylvania field have for the past 23 years negotiated and concluded their own scale agreement governing the Central District of Pennsylvania. In violation of custom and precedent of 23 years standing the U. M. W. of A. of District No. 2, refused to meet the operators of this association to negotiate a wage scale and agreement and in violation of their contract of April 26, 1920, went on strike April 1 last.

Rule 25 of the scale agreement which expired March 31st, 1922, provides:

"In the event of a new scale agreement not having been signed on or before March 31, 1922, then and in that event the U. M. W. of A., District No. 2, will continue all men in mines regularly at work under the wages and conditions of this agreement for an additional thirty days after the date on which the Scale Committees of operators and miners hold their first meeting for the purpose of negotiating a scale to succeed this present contract, the wages paid by the operators to the miners dating from April 1st, 1922, for such portion of the 30 days work as extend beyond April 1st, 1922, shall be those that are agreed to in the next contract. * * *"

One minute after the scale agreement of April 26, 1920 expired the union miners of District No. 2 went on strike. The walkout was not delayed so much as 30 minutes, let alone the 30 days to which the miners scale committee of District No. 2, U. M. W. of A. had bound the members of its organization by solemn agreement with the Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania.

fields are actually only about 50 per cent higher than in 1914. This is because operators have made no increases in the rent of company houses. A five or six room dwelling still rents at from $7 to $12 a month. "Shelter" is 17.7 per cent of the Department of Labor's budget and shows a national increase of 69 per cent since 1914. Deducting this item of increase from the miner's budget, it will be found that he can buy as much with $1.50 today as he could with $1.00 in 1914. In other words he can live as well on a wage of 3.96 today as he did on a wage of $2.64 in 1914.

This comparison should be borne in mind in considering the operators demand for reasonable reduction. These wage rates are forty to one hundred per cent higher than the wages paid in any other industry employing the same class of labor.

Loss of Business to Non-Union Field
The total loss of production in Central Pennsylvania during 1921 has been borne by the union mines. The loss caused by displacement of tonnage by reason of change in wage rates at other competitive mines will total 7,085,000 tons. This is a loss in addition to that caused by the business depression, and is due to the failure of the United Mine Workers of America to recognize economic conditions.

Outlook for Business
The end of the coal year, April 1, 1922, marked the beginning of the strike, also the contract making period for business next year. The future of the coal business in Central Pennsylvania depends upon the time and terms of the settlement effected on this strike ordered by the United Mine Workers of America. It is obvious to everyone that there must be radical readjustment of wages in Central Pennsylvania to meet the conditions in the surrounding coal fields with which we compete and to realize that proper basis of stabilization by securing a proper relation of wages in the mining industry as compared with wages paid in other and kindred industries.

Intermittency of Employment
The principal reason given by the United Mine Workers of America for the maintenance of the war-wage scale and their demand for a six hour day and a five day week, is intermittency of employment suffered by the miners. A great deal of the loss of working time suffered by the union mines of Central Pennsylvania during the year 1921 was caused by business being taken away from the union mines and absorbed by the mines that had made the necessary wage reductions. It is an admitted fact that the coal mining industry is overdeveloped and over-manned. The question of over-development is a matter of individual investment and the exercise of the American right to enter into any legitimate business which the operation of natural economic laws will adjust.

The excess number of men employed in the mining industry is due in a large measure to the very high wage rates paid in the coal mines of the country, as compared with the wages paid in other industry employing such a large percentage of common labor, thereby attracting men to the industry; to the fact that though coal mining is hazardous it is not unpleasant, instead it is an agreeable occupation. Coal mines today are better ventilated than large city office buildings. Sixty-four per cent of the men employed in Central Pennsylvania mines are contract miners and are to all practical intent and purpose, their own "blossoms." They have exercised the freedom of coming to work at will, leaving their place of work when they desire, lying idle on any day they wish and are practically master in their own working places. In no other industry is this great amount of freedom enjoyed by the workmen. This is a reason why men like coal mining and persist in remaining coal miners in the face of intermittency of employment. Another important reason is that in other industries when depression occurs, the usual procedure is to lay off or furlough those workmen who are not necessary to produce the decreased output, and these employees are forced to secure work in other plants or in other industries, or take their places in the ranks of the unemployed, while in the mining industry this condition does not obtain. If a mine has only 50 per cent orders, instead of laying off 50 per cent of its men and running six days a week, the 100 per cent employees work 50 per cent time, or 3 days a week. If it is only half time operation in the mining industry, all those engaged in that industry are permitted to earn the "half loaf" which is considered better than none. In addition, the mining industry, at such times is willing and is forced to give work to many men out of employment in other lines of industry in our own district during the year 1921, where other large industries laid off thousands of men, hundreds of these unemployed men found their way into the different coal mines and took their share of whatever work was to be had at the particular mine where they found employment. This condition of unselfishness in the mining industry is one of its bright spots. The operators do not wish to change it, and the mine workers would not permit it to be changed. This fact, also, is not known to the general public and has never been recognized by short sighted labor leaders. Mine workers may be employed part time, at the only mines totally unemployed are those located where the mine in the community are totally idle and they are unable to move to some other town where a mine or mines are in operation. Such cases are the exception to the rule.

Intermittency in the mining industry could be reduced and practically eliminated by the ruthless exercise of the right to reduce the working force in proportion to diminishing production as it is exercised in other industries.

Collective Bargaining
The members of the Central Coal Association have practiced the principle of collective bargaining for the last twenty-one years. We have never expressed a desire to break down the system of collective bargaining. We have expressed a desire to continue proper joint relations by requesting a joint conference with our employees. We have been denied the joint conference by the United Mine Workers of America. The failure of the United Mine Workers of America to meet the operators in joint conference repudiates the principle of collective bargaining. This is an attempt of the United Mine Workers of America to perpetuate a system of monopolistic control of wages and working conditions by forcing the majority of the operators in the United States to accept the conclusions and decisions of the joint conference conducted by a minority of the miner and operators of the country. This autocratic method of dealing with employers in other than the Central Competitive Field is due in a large measure to the check-off system by which coal operators deduct the dues and assessments for the miners' union from the pay envelopes of their employees and turn the money over to the agents of the United Mine Workers of America. At the present time there is no legal responsibility on the part of labor unions of labor leaders to keep contracts with the employer and frequent violations of the contract, forcing changes in the wage schedules, have occurred during the past four years. The latest violation being when the agreement negotiated under the terms of the award of the U. S. Bituminous Coal Commission was repudiated in August, 1920 and through a series of "wildcat" strikes in the states of Illinois and Indiana, the mine workers forced the disruption of the Central Competitive Field joint conference and by these methods compelled all union districts in the United States to pay an additional $1.50 per day to day labor. Such extreme and costly violation of contract can be committed with impunity because there is no legal responsibility.

The check-off also relieves the leaders of the miners' union from the necessity of financing their Union. No other business in the United States is automatically financed. This method of collecting funds fails to develop the breadth of vision and responsible leadership in the union, which is essential to the stabilization of the industry. The demagogue and notoriety seeker, secure in their financial position, are free to appeal to passions and prejudices of the individual mine workers and are rapidly securing political control of the organization. The only responsibility, therefore, that rests upon the miners' leaders of today is a moral one. The tendency of the system practiced by them for the past twenty-five years and the lack of financial responsibility are producing a class of leaders who do not recognize moral obligations. In our opinion these factors have operated to bring about the present situation and it should be remedied by placing the requirements of financing their union upon the shoulders of the leaders. The union has had over 30 years of experience, and if it is a proper institute it should be able to secure its finances without difficulty by voluntary contributions from its members and it should not be necessary to compel involuntary contribution through the check-off system.

As a result of the foregoing facts the members of the Central Coal Association have been compelled to post the following notice addressed to their employees at their mines:

Notice

This Company notifies its employees that it protests against the infraction of our employees, to the public and to ourselves, of the strike order issued by the national officers of the United Mine Workers of America. Without our having had an opportunity to discuss a new agreement effective from April 1st. We are ready to meet our employees to discuss a new arrangement at any time.

Our Seals agreement with the United Mine Workers of America expired on March 31st, 1922. The Central Coal Association, of which this company is a member, has repeatedly requested the United Mine Workers of America of District No. 2, for a conference to negotiate a wage agreement. The United Mine Workers of America of District No. 2 have refused to meet the operators of the Central Coal Association for that purpose.

"Holy Cannon" Worshipped in Batavia.
In picturesque Batavia there is an ancient piece of ordnance half-buried in the ground, which is known as the "Holy Cannon." This is considered particularly sacred by the natives. At the breach of the cannon there is a resting of a man's wrist and hand, and a small shrine is erected over the spot. This symbol is regarded by the superstitious natives as a symbol of good, and worshipped accordingly. Childless women sit beside it, fully believing that their prayers for a family will be heard and granted.

Good Plot Everything.
A plot, after all, is a design to which everything else must be subordinated. The reader's attention is to be engaged and enthralled. Rude life may conform to this design, and the psychologist may despise it, yet there is no such thing as a good novel that is not a good plot.—Francis Blackett.

A Stunning Sweater

The popularity of the modern sweater, as indeed of all knitted outerwear, is based not only on its wide usefulness, but on the great variety of styles that are being created continuously. There seems to be no end to the variations produced in cut, color and material, for sweaters reflect every move and fancy of Dame Fashion, and every change of season.

For the woman or girl who seeks something that reflects the spirit of spring, something characteristic of the awakening season, in lightness of weight, suitable color, and timely cut, the sweater shown here fills the need.

It is a stunning example of the popular slipover with long sleeves. It has a herring-bone stitch with five horizontal staggered Roman stripes. There are turned-back cuffs, and the round neck is hand finished. The four holes, fastened in two places at the back, lends an element of decoration with its tassel ends.

Its uses are manifold. For street wear there is nothing more chic. On lawn, porch, or at the seashore it fits in the picture, while all indications point to deeply entrenched popularity at the country club, on tennis court or golf links during the spring and summer.

Bradford Road Dispute Being Ironed Out; Lobby Against Route Denied

There was a great deal of crimination and recrimination the past couple of months regarding those two pieces of improved road in Bradford township, and before the County Commissioners finally decided to carry out the original program by building both, the residents of the different sections were making faces at each other and had almost reached the point of setting brother against brother in real civil war. All that is over now and while "peas and hominy" now reign there was once a time when a Biglerite charged John G. Maines, a Pleasant Valley route sponsor with enlisting the aid of outsiders to lobby against the Bigler route. John G., of course knew better and never did it, but to effectually and once for all nail the rumor we print the following self-explanatory letter, knowing as we do, that while Joe is not a George Washington and could main, rend, tear and dislocate the truth, did he so will, he had no reason to fall in this case and sets at rest the tale in his letter, as follows:

April 1, 1922
Mr. J. G. Maines,
Woodland, Pa.

Dear Sir:
In the matter of the Road question which you called to my attention, I beg to say that at no time did you cause the location of any road in our Township, and I don't think we ever discussed the road question, not in my knowledge. Here you are not blamed for anything in connection with the road question as far as I have been concerned, because this would be a misrepresentation of the facts.

Very truly yours,

The prefixes of "pseudo" and "pseud" are derived from the Greek pseudo, false, and pseudos, falsehood. Combined with other words—or forms of words—they have the following meanings: 1. A false, spurious or counterfeit condition. 2. An abnormal form of or a close resemblance to (something). 3. A resemblance in any symptoms, but a lack of the specific characters that mark the true form. 4. A resemblance, for example, a pseudomane.

A Sultan's Watch.
In 1884 a most elaborate watch was made—of twenty-two carat gold—for Sultan Abdul-Medjid by a firm at Cornhill. This giant watch was five inches in diameter. Though it had no bell, it chimed the hours and quarters, the striking apparatus consisting of wires. Its powerful yet pleasant tone resembled that of a cathedral clock. The cost of this wonderful thing was twelve hundred guineas.

Normal Temperature.
As defined by experts, normal temperature for any place is the temperature obtained by averaging a period of temperatures so long that further additions will not materially affect the result. Actually, however, there are only a few such long records in the country, and normal is taken to mean the average of a period of observation of selected length, usually the longest obtainable.

During the course of the emigration the olive tree was not a habitant of

had been known to have been trans-pose its origin in this country can be attributed to its having been brought
